I don't know whether it is that Coionel Fulkerson has been primping up in Washington, or that my spectacles show him in the brighter light since his renunciation of Washone and Arthur; but really it does to be disposed of, and they gave some trouble, but there were no complications, except some were no serious complications. But it soon came about that Mahone had as complete control of the Legislature as any man has of his children. Mr. Fulkerson humorously described how this was brought about. There were no leaders in either house. Mahone managed every detail. It was done by blandishment, not bribery. Mahone has had entire control of the party in all its details, and what is its condition.
